epitaph

my body has existed for 27 years without knowing what yours feels like pressed against mine.

third street heartaches that night i waited for your call half past ten but it never came someone told me this would happen but i didn't want to listen days went by and i felt an emptiness that i hope to never feel again you vowed to me you'd be a good husband but those don't leave you like this weeks went by and i no longer cried i knew that you weren't coming back so why did you marry me to leave and make me a widow in heart?

when your breath shuddered i hoped i waited to see your eyes open skin cold and your heartbeat slowing i begged to hear your voice again then as i waited for you to come back to me i realised that you never would
