SPEAKERS

Barry P. Bosworth is a Senior Fellow in Economic Studies at The Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C. He began his association with Brookings in 1971 and was appointed a Senior Fellow in 1979.

Dr. Bosworth was the director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability during the Carter Administration. He also served as staff economist for the President's Council of Economic Advisers in the last year of the Johnson administration. He was on the faculty at Harvard University and Visiting Lecturer at the University of California-Berkeley.

Dr. Bosworth's latest book (forth coming from Brookings) is titled Saving and Investment in a Global Economy. He has authored, co-authored or edited seven other books since 1975 including Tax Incentives and Economic Growth (1984), Can Americans Afford to Grow Old? (1988), and The North American Free Trade Agreement: An Assessment of the Research (1992). In addition he has written more than two dozen major articles for various professional publications. A major focus of several of his more recent research has been on the decline in savings. He often serves as an expert commentator on television network and cable news programs.

Born in Kent County, Michigan in 1942, Dr. Bosworth graduated from the University of Michigan in 1964. He was awarded a Ph.D. in Economics from Michigan in 1969.

Gary Stern became president and chief executive officer of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis in March 1985. As a Federal Reserve Bank president, he serves as a member of the Federal Open Market Committee—the Fed's principal body responsible for establishing national money and credit policies.

Stern, a native of Wisconsin, joined the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis in January 1982 as senior vice president and director of research. Before joining the Minneapolis Fed, Stern was a partner in a New York-based economic consulting firm. Stern's prior experience includes seven years at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Stern serves on the board of trustees of the National Council on Economic Education (New York) and KTCA—Twin Cities Public Television. He also serves on the board of Minneapolis College of Art and Design and the board of overseers of the Curtis L. Carlson School of Management at the University of Minnesota. He is chairman of the board of trustees of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Minnesota.

Stern holds an A.B. in economics from Washington University, St. Louis, and a Ph.D. in economics from Rice University, Houston.

Thomas F. Stinson is a professor in the Department of Agricultural and Applied Economics, University of Minnesota. Since 1987 he also has served as the Minnesota State Economist where he is responsible for preparing the state revenue forecasts.

Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Minnesota he served as an economist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture where he conducted research on tax policy as well as on alternative strategies for rural economic development. Among his publications is the U.S. Senate Committee report, Governing the Heartlands: Can Rural Local Governments Survive the Farm Crisis?, prepared while he was detailed to the Senate Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations in 1986.

A native of Washington State, Stinson holds a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Minnesota, and an undergraduate degree in political science from Washington State University. He is a past president of the Minnesota Economic Association and a member of the Minneapolis Star Tribune's Board of Economists.
