Winter Institute Speaker Program Presenters

Ruby Payne

Ruby K. Payne, Ph.D., has been involved with education since 1972 as a teacher, principal, consultant and administrator. The lessons learned during those years became the background for her powerful first book, A Framework for Understanding Poverty, in which Ruby discusses the hidden rules that govern how each of us behaves in our social class.

Those rules, hidden and only known to those within the group, prove to be a major stumbling block for individuals trying to move to a new social class. Often, those in positions of power and authority come from a class with rules different from those they work with, understanding and communication can break down. For instance, a middle-class teacher with a classroom of students largely from poverty often expects them to behave in middle-class ways – and is perplexed when they do not.

Ruby has developed this message for seminars and workshops as well. Speaking to approximately 200 groups a year, Ruby is working to spread the word throughout North America that children of poverty need not suffer through an educational system oblivious to their needs. More than educators are heeding her message. Judges, social workers, ministers, community leaders and health professionals are all learning from Ruby's work.

A gifted synthesizer, Ruby presents her research and observations in such a way that many people experience "eye-opening learning," enhancing their own abilities to help children of poverty succeed.

Ruby received her B.A. from Goshen (IN) College. She earned a master's degree from Western Michigan University and her doctorate from Loyola (IL) University.

Alan B. Krueger

Alan B. Krueger is Bendheim Professor of Economics and Public Affairs at Princeton University where he is also Director of Industrial Relations. He has published widely on the economics of education, labor demand, income distribution, social insurance, labor market regulation, and environmental economics. Since 1987 he has held a joint appointment in the Economics Department and Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton. He is Director of the Princeton University Survey Research Center, Director of the Industrial Relations Section and a Research Associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He is the author of Education Matters: A Selection of Essays on Education, coauthor of Myth and Measurement: The New Economics of the Minimum Wage, co-editor of The Journal of the European Economic Association and a member of the editorial board of Science. He was editor of the Journal of Economic Perspectives from 1996 to 2002. In 1994-95 he served as Chief Economist at the U.S. Department of Labor. He also writes a monthly column for the New York Times called, "The Economic Scene". He was named a Sloan Fellow in Economics in 1992, an NBER Olin Fellow in 1989-90, and awarded the Kershaw Prize by the Association for Public Policy and Management in 1997. He was elected a Fellow of the Econometric Society in 1996 and awarded the Mahalanobis Memorial Medal by the Indian Econometric Society in 2001. In 2002 he was elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts & Sciences. He received a B.S. degree (with honors) from Cornell University's School of Industrial & Labor Relations, an A.M. in Economics from Harvard University in 1985, and a Ph.D. in Economics from Harvard University in 1987.
