

Survive & Thrive: A Journal for Medical Humanities and Narrative as Medicine

---

Volume 5 | Issue 1

Article 3

---

2020

On Showing up at Open Mic Five Days after Plastic Surgery

Anna L. Weaver

None, notanna96@me.com

Follow this and additional works at: https://repository.stcloudstate.edu/survive\_thrive

Part of the Medical Humanities Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Weaver, Anna L. (2020) "On Showing up at Open Mic Five Days after Plastic Surgery," Survive & Thrive: A Journal for Medical Humanities and Narrative as Medicine: Vol. 5 : Iss. 1 , Article 3.

Available at: https://repository.stcloudstate.edu/survive\_thrive/vol5/iss1/3

This Poem is brought to you for free and open access by theRepository at St. Cloud State. It has been accepted for inclusion in Survive & Thrive: A Journal for Medical Humanities and Narrative as Medicine by an authorized editor of theRepository at St. Cloud State. For more information, please contact tdsteman@stcloudstate.edu.

on showing up at open mic five days after plastic surgery

And isn't it just like a poet to stand here, bruises concealed,

but fingering the stitches? Then again, is anyone ever really sure whether she wants people to look or to look away?

And who isn't threaded and taped together by her choices? I didn't tell my surgeon, but the truth is, I'm hoping for a scar

so I never forget just how open I can be.
So I remember that someone once looked inside and that now something will always be missing. Something left a hole that my body remembers.

I want an even scar—deliberate and quiet as Braille. One that says to anyone close enough to touch that acceptance is a language I speak only with the heavy accent of agency.

One that says, this is my body and I decide.